Confidence falters

- ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence was down 1.1% last week; The financial conditions subindices were the only indices supporting the index.
- Current finances was up by a healthy 5%, reversing much of the recent falls, while future finances gained 0.4% for its third weekly rise.
- The combined Economic conditions subindex registered its fourth weekly decline and remains a significant drag on overall sentiment. Current economic conditions fell 4% to its lowest level since early 2017, while future economic conditions lost 3.8%.
- The 'Time to buy a household item' was down 3.3% last week compared to a gain of 5.1% previously.
- The four-week average for inflation expectations was stable at 4.1%, though weekly reading fell below 4% after five weeks of stability.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

Last week (26–27 Oct)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (4-week ma)
110.4	-1.1%	111.3	113.1	4.1%

Data collected last weekend (Saturday and Sunday), based on around 1,000 face-to-face interviews. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence lost ground last week as concerns about the economic outlook trumped a more positive assessment of personal finances. Uncertainty around global trade is likely a factor. At the same time, accommodative monetary policy and tax cuts are fuelling better financial conditions. The drop in weekly inflation expectations comes after a period of stability and ahead of the release of the Q3 CPI. We expect that report to confirm that inflation pressures remain subdued.
